

Birds of Note July 1992 to Nov 2023
from Pennsylvania Birds
Volume 6 No. 3 to Volume 37 No. 4
Introduction

Please read!

The records listed here are those records that were listed in the Birds of Note section of Pennsylvania Birds starting in July 1992. Prior to that time, all records were hidden inside individual county reports and only the very unusual was listed separately in the Summary of the Season. Therefore, extracting species lists like these was impractical.

The criteria for inclusion in Birds of Note was that the species was either (1) reported in 5 or fewer counties that quarter (with some leeway) or (2) a species requiring review by the Pennsylvania Ornithological Records Committee (PORC). This means some very common species may show up because they are uncommon in that time frame. (For example, Acadian Flycatcher in October.) Since Volume 17 (2003) the inclusion in this section has become more of a judgement call by the Seasonal Editor rather than a simple quantitative rule.

Many of the records here were not accepted by PORC and many were never submitted for review. This list is intended as an overview of what was reported, not a definitive record of accepted records in the state.

A year or quarter without a listing for a particular species does not necessarily mean the species was not recorded that period. In fact it could mean that it was more abundant than usual — being seen in more than five counties—and therefore not showing up in the Birds of Note section!

The birds are listed in alphabetical order (to avoid changes in AOU order) and consist of the species name, the year, followed by the county, number, date, and observers. Some notes are also included. Each entry represents one quarter in that year. The quarters were Jan-Mar, Apr-Jun, Jul-Sep, and Oct-Dec. In 2002 the periods were Jan-Mar, Apr-Jun, Jul, and Aug-Nov. Succeeding years are Dec-Feb, Mar-May, Jun-Jul, Aug-Nov.

NOTE: Please note splits and lumps during these years. For instance Sharp-tailed Sparrow is listed as Sharp-tailed Sparrow during 93-95, and as Nelson’s Sharp-tailed Sparrow and Saltmarsh Sharp-tailed Sparrow afterwards, and then just Saltmarsh and Nelson’s sparrows after that!

Plegadis sp.- 1992 - Erie: An all dark Plegadis was observed at PISP 10/15. It was Little Blue Heron (Egretta caerulea) or Snowy Egret (E. thula) in size with an extended neck and a long decurved bill. The legs were all dark and projected beyond the tail. As it circled the point it alternately flapped its wings and glided, but unfortunately it never landed so I could thoroughly study it. See photograph. I believe the chances of a Plegadis in fall at PISP being a White-faced Ibis (P. chihi) is as good as, if not better than, a Glossy Ibis (P. falcinellus). There is a fall record of a Plegadis in Ohio that was identified as a White-faced Ibis! (Jerry McWilliams)

Plegadis sp. - 1996 Erie: 1 on 10/6 at Presque Isle S.P. could not be identified as to Glossy or White-faced (Jerry McWilliams, Geoff Robinson).

Ross's Goose - 1993 Berks: 1 in a flock of 580 Snow Geese at Lake Ontelaunee 3/30 (Ken Lebo). This is a 1st county record.; Lancaster: 1 near Muddy Run 1/15 (Robert Schutsky) and 1 at Middle Creek WMA 3/26 (Randy Miller).

Ross's Goose - 1993 Lancaster: 1 was found at Octoraro L. on the 12/19 Solanco CBC. This is a "first" for any Pa. CBC and, to the best of our knowledge, the 1st Dec. record for Pa. This bird kept company with more than 20,000 Snow Geese. Not satisfied with just 1 Ross' Goose, Schutsky picked out 2 birds the next day. Along with the Snow Geese, they remained through the end of the quarter.

Ross's Goose - 1994 Lancaster: 1 frequented a temporary pond just s. of Mt. Joy. It shared the pond with about 3000 Snow Geese. Jonathan Heller first found it on 3/30 and observed it at close range for about 20 minutes. He noted every pertinent detail including the bluish color on the bill. The next day, Heller and Harold Morrin relocated a Ross' Goose. This bird cooperated and was view for over 15 minutes. In every respect— plumage, size, and shape—it resembled the bird seen the previous day. However, both observers noticed a very fine black gape line on the bill. This mark could be seen only at close range. Heller raised the possibility that this bird may represent a Snow X Ross's hybrid. Any comments?

Ross's Goose - 1994 Lancaster: First discovered at Octoraro L. on the Solanco CBC 12/18 (LL), it stayed with the thousands of Snow Geese well into Jan.

Ross's Goose - 1995 Berks: 1 on 3/24-28 at L. Ontelaunee (Kerry Grim, Ken Lebo, Matt Spence, Matt Wlasniewski); Chester: 1 on 3/12 at Struble L. (no observer, no details); Lancaster: The sightings of at least one white-phase bird continued at Octoraro L. until at least 1/28 (m.ob.). One bird also turned up near Mount Joy with 8,700 Snow Geese 2/28 (Jonathan Heller). On 1/31, I observed an apparent blue-phase Ross' Goose at Octoraro L. The neck was entirely dark, but the head/face was white. The size and shape of the bird, length of the neck, and size and shape of the bill seemed identical to a normal white-phase Ross'. However, I could not positively rule out the possibility of a hybrid because I wasn't close enough to eliminate the possibility of a faint grin patch. Later, others also saw a blue-phase Ross' at Octoraro L. (EBNT).

Sedge Wren - 1992 Wyoming: Recorded at about 40' in grassy edge of Phelps Swamp — closer observation not possible because of swamp and pond between the bird and observer. The bird was recorded in very dense fog and was identified chiefly by its call — a dry, staccato "chap-chap-chap-chap" which the bird uttered every 10–15 seconds for 5–10 minutes. Mostly the calls were in fours, but a few were in threes. (At no time did I hear it add the "chrrr" at the end of the calls.) I went back to the swamp after the fog lifted, but could not locate the bird. I am familiar with the Sedge Wren call, having heard it several times in the 1950s and 1960s when it was not quite as scarce as it is today. I have also heard it on probable breeding sites in Michigan. I recognized the call immediately, but still checked it with tapes when I got home, and I was still positive of the identification. To the best of my knowledge this is the 1st Co. record. Bill Reid Trumpeter Swan - 1993 Indiana: A tagged bird was seen from 11/16- 27 at Yellow Creek SP (M. Higbee et al.) See Notes from the Field for more details.

Trumpeter Swan - 1994 Somerset: 3 on 10/30 at Quemahoning Dam were probably from the re-introduction program in the upper midwest and Canada (Mike & Evaleen Watko).

Trumpeter Swan - 1995 Lancaster: On 2/22, Randy Miller watched a Trumpeter Swan from "Stop 1 " at Middle Creek WMA as it stood on the ice with Tundra Swans. No one succeeded in relocating the bird on succeeding days. Although Trumpeter Swan reintroduction programs in Ontario and other locales cast doubt on this bird's origin, to my knowledge it represents the first sighting in Lancaster.

Trumpeter Swan - 1995 Bedford: 2 imm. on 4/25 at Dunnings Creek (Dick Byers), are presumed to be part of the mid-west and Canada re-introduction program.

Trumpeter Swan - 1996 Erie: 1 in April at Siegel Marsh (Matthew Chimenti); Lancaster: 2 adult and 3 imm. were present from 4/24-5/12 at Washington Boro (Bob Schutsky et al.); Northampton: 1 on 4/26 at Minsi L. (Rick Wiltraut). (These are presumed to be birds from the re-introduction program in the great lakes region. —eds.)
