This morning at Yellow State Park in Indiana County, the Sedge Wren found yesterday was seen again by Lee Carnahan and briefly by others. The two Baird's Sandpipers that have been present in Little Yellow Cove for about a week were also still there.

While we were birding in Armstrong County, I received a phone call from Tom Simmons who was canoeing at Yellow Creek. Fifty Hudsonian Godwits flew over the park; 4 landed on the point west of the swimming area. Also present were one Wilson's Phalarope and one Black-bellied Plover. Lee Carnahan is planning to canoe from the north shore to see if he can relocate any of these species.

BTW, our little fall-out near Elderton in Armstrong County included 14 species of warblers plus a Brewster's, both cuckoos, and a Yellow-bellied Flycatcher.

Four Hudsonian Godwits, one Western Sandpiper, and one Wilson's Phalarope (among a multitude of other shorebirds) remained at Yellow Creek State Park this evening. To see these birds, take the observatory trail from the main recreational area. From the observatory trail, take the second path to the right toward the water. Check the mudflats straight ahead.
