Description	Swallow with blackish black and cap; buffy rump, throat, cheek, and forehead patch. The pale throat contrasts with dark cap. In flight: square tail, round wings, and buffy rump and neck made it easy to pick out from the other swallows. Separated in the air from Cliff Swallow by the pale throat.
Behavior (be as detailed as possible about what the bird was doing)	First seen perched with many Tree Swallows about 35 yards away. Viewed through scope.

Later seen in flight, while feeding over impoundment.

Separation from similar species (How you eliminated others)

Cliff Swallow has a dark throat and red cheek patch.

Are you positive of your identification ? (Why or why not)

Yes--Have seen both species many times.

During
