| Description | bird sighted on telephone pole along route 36. After passing pole, I turned and observed for several minutes from around 100 yds. Then approached in car to within approx. 30-50 ft of pole. Bird did not flush for almost 2 minutes. My daughter took video from her I phone. Grey phase gyr falcon, immature, male or small female. I have seen female captive bred gyr, and gyr hybrids. The bird sighted appeared to me smaller. Good view of both tarsus, which had no bands (falconry, artif propagation or USFW) of any kind present |

Behavior (be as detailed as possible about what the bird was doing)

Bird hunting from pole. Appeared very naïve, as it allowed so a close approach by car, even with my daughters arms and phone flailing outside the car window. After approx. 2 min the bird flushed. Video shorter in length than actual time I was able to view. Strong wingbeat with intermittent soar/glide, estimated bird covered half mile distance and achieved 600-700 ft elevation in less than a minute.
